Self-Determination

AFD believes that the African diaspora has the right to self-determination. This means that the diaspora has the right to determine its own political, economic, and social development. AFD supports the creation of independent African nations and the development of strong African institutions.

Pan-Africanism

AFD is a Pan-Africanist movement. This means that the movement believes in the unity of all African people, regardless of their nationality or location. AFD supports the creation of a united Africa and the development of African solidarity.

Economic Development

AFD believes that economic development is essential for the advancement of Africa and the African diaspora. The movement supports policies that promote economic growth, job creation, and poverty reduction. AFD also supports the development of African businesses and the creation of a more equitable global economic system.

History of AFD

AFD was founded in 2016 by a group of African diaspora activists. The movement has since grown rapidly and now has chapters in over 20 countries. AFD has played a leading role in organizing protests against police brutality and racial injustice. The movement has also worked to promote voter turnout and civic engagement among the African diaspora.

The Future of AFD

AFD is a growing movement with a bright future. The movement is committed to fighting for the interests of the African diaspora and to building a better future for Africa and the world.
