A Journey of Discovery and Compassion

In the midst of the unprecedented challenges posed by the COVID-19 pandemic, children around the world are facing a unique set of uncertainties and emotions. With schools closed, social distancing measures in place, and a constant barrage of news and information, it can be overwhelming for them to make sense of this global crisis.

Recognizing this need, the authors of the beloved Justice the Series have created a timely and invaluable resource: "Helping Children Understand COVID-19: Justice the Series." This captivating book empowers children with the knowledge, empathy, and resilience they need to navigate the pandemic and its aftermath.

A Trusted Guide for Children and Parents Alike

Written in a clear and engaging style, "Helping Children Understand COVID-19" presents complex scientific concepts in a way that is accessible and understandable for children. The book follows the Justice family as they explore the virus, its origins, and how it spreads. Children will learn about important safety measures such as handwashing, social distancing, and wearing masks.

Beyond the scientific facts, the book also delves into the emotional and social impact of the pandemic. Children will learn how to cope with feelings of anxiety, isolation, and loss. They will also discover how to be empathetic towards others who are struggling and how to lend a helping hand.
